"Based on this situation, we can say Taiwan is part of the People's Republic of China is a natural assertion that the Chinese mainland and Taiwan Festerday. are inseparable and it is not a question a third country argues." Nixon Sets TV Report On Summit

Address Expected Within Two Days

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (IHT). President Nixon returns, tonight to a capital eagerly await-ing details of his history-making eight-day visit to China.

The President, whose 9 p.m. (0200 GMT) arrival with Mrs. Nixon and his official party will be covered on network television, will be greeted by a turnout of virtually all of this capital's diplomatic colony as well as government and congressional figures.

One diplomat who will be ab-sent is Nationalist Chinese Am-bassador James C. H. Shen, whose government today strongly criticized Mr. Nixon's journey. Mr. Shen said he was to be host at a dinner and couldn't make it out to Andrews Air Force Base for the President's arrival. But embassy officials said that his absence would demonstrate Tai-pei's disapproval of the U.S.-

The State Department invited the chiefs of the nearly 120 diplomatic missions in Wash-ington to appear at the air base for the President's welcome home U.S. government agencies had worked throughout the weekend to round up employees to attend the greeting ceremonies.

Report on 'Specifics' En route home, the President told a crowd of greeters at a stopover that he would deliver a televised report to the nation on "the specifics" of his China trip. Before giving that report, expected Wednesday or Thursday night, the President is believed to he planning to brief both his cabinet and congressional leaders on some 15 hours of talks he had with China's Premier Chou En-lai and his hourlong meeting with Communist party Chairman Mao Tre-tung, After a 10-hour rest stop ot Anchorage, Alaska, the Nixon

On the flight from Shanghai to Anchorage, Mr. Nixou had conferred with aides and caught up on paperwork.

'Chance for Peace'

About 500 persons, including Alaska's Gov. William Egan and former Gov. Walter Hickel, braved a bitter wind to see the President and Mrs. Nixon off at Elmendorf. Schoolchildren held aloft two huge scrolls saying: "Welcome home, Mr. President." Before boarding his plane, the Spirit of 76, the President spoke briefly to the schoolchildren and shook hands with spectators. Mr. Nixon told them: The chance for

Big U.S. Trade Deficit in January But 6 Economic Indexes Move Up

By Edwin L. Dale Jr. WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (NYT). The government's composite index of leading indicators of the economy rose strongly in January. but the size of the increase was magnified by a downward revision of the December index, the Com-merce Department reported today. In a separate development, the nation showed another large trade deficit of $318.9 million in Jan-uary. A continuation of trade deficits for some months following the recent realignment of currency exchange rates, which in-cluded a sizeable effective devaluation of the dollar, had been generally expected. The composite index of leading indicators was 1348 in January on a preliminary basis, with 1987 taken as 100. This was up 2.3 percent from December, an unusually large increase. But the original December figure of 133.4 was revised downward to 131.8, as several of the 12 indicators used became available after the initial report.

Despite the revisions, which are customery in this economic reries, the index of leading indicators has shown an unmistaka... bly strong upward trend since at least the spring of last year. So far this trend has not been followed, however, by an equally strong uptrend in general busi-Dess activity. .

Harold C. Passer, assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, commented on the January preliminary report in a statement. He said: "The sustained upward trend in the composite index of leading economic indicators during the past 15 months, coupled with the recent intensification of that uptrend, support the projections of strong economic gains in 1972."

The index contains 12 indicators with a good historical record of predicting general business, of which eight are now available for January. Six of those eight rose and two declined.

Those showing improvement in Jamuary were new orders for durable goods, initial claims for unemployment insurance, industrial materials prices, stock market prices, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, and the ratio of price to unit labor cost. Declining were the average work week and huilding permits.

The export-import deficit in January, at $318.9 million, was a little higher than in Novemher and December but well below the October peak of $821.4

The figures continue to be dis-strikes. In addition, the effective devaluation of the dollar means that a given volume of imports is reported at a higher dollar figure, and a given volume of exports at a lower dollar figure, than before,

As most docks were working for most of January, both exports and imports showed an increase of nearly 10 percent over December with imports reaching a record level of $4.54 billion, Exports, not a record, were $4.22 billion.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 28 (IHT) Common Market foreign ministers together with representatives Firstly economic and monetary from the four applicant countries union and the community's social agreed today that the European summit would take place in Paris during the third week of October, possibly the 19th.

Apparently with minimum difficulty, they also agreed on the main items on the summit agenda and they are to hold a series of further preparatory meetings among themselves for at less; the next three months.

Walter Scheel, the German foreign minister, said it had been an "excellent meeting" and Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg, who is the Council of Ministers' current chairman, indicated his satisfaction with the day's talks. But the agreement was no surprise President Georges Pompidou of France has been urging the nine other governments to bold a Paris con erence as a contain-raiser to the enlarged European Economic Community for some time. The October date was arranged to enable Ireland, Norway and Denmark to hold-their referendums on REC entry beforehand, so that they would be assured of their status at the sum-concerned with three main areas. programs. Secondly, political cooperation among the Ten and the future of the community's institutions—the commission and the European Parliament. Lastly, the EECs relations with the rest of the world would be debated.

Under this last heading, the summit would separately discuss its relations with other industrialized countries like America and Japan. It would also discuss the Communist bloc countries and relations with the developing world. In particular, Britain, which was represented today by Geoffrey Rippon, who handled the entry negotiations, is pleased that the talks about economic and monetary writer will include ideas for other forms of cooperation-notably in industrial, technological and regional policies.

These are subjects where the community has marked time during the past few years and everyone, existing members and the others, is expecting EEC en-largement to give impetus to problem-solving in these fields.

an agreement with the Lebanese government. Quoting guerrilla spokesmen in Beirut, the radio said Israel had "occupied Patabland."

It said the four-day operation was aimed at stopping guerrilla attacks against Israeli civilian and military targets and forcing the hand of the Betrut government in its conflict with the guerrilla organizations.

[Returning soldiers told reporters that some of the houses had been blown up with guerrillus still inside them, Reuters reported.

[They said they had been welcomed by Lebanese villagers who sometimes led them to guerrilla hideouts, and begged the Israell officers to supply them with arms so they could defend themselves against the guerrilla menace.

They found many weapons and equipment, some of it of Chinese manufacture, they said. In sev-eral places, they found the little red book of quotations by Mao Tac-tung.]

Earlier communiqués indicated the Israelis went on with the opermiles inside Lebanon, despite a UN Security Council resolution calling for their immediate withdrawal.

Aldrin, Second Man on the Moon: A Postscript

By Wayne Warga

LOS ANGELES.—Carl Jung, the brilliant scientific explorer of psychology, theology and mythology, once remarked that "space flights are merely an escape a fleeing away from oneself, hecause it is easier to go to Mars or to the moon than it is to penetrate one's own being."

Edwin (Buss) Aidrin ir., a scientific explorer of note himself and one of the first two men to step onto the moon, found Jung's remark in a newpaper not long ago and remarked, somewhat ruefully, "If he only knew the whole story." For Col. Aldrin, a highly educated and motivated man, the peculiar hazards of being an American hero began in July, 1969, when Apollo-11 splashed down in the Pacific. The splashdown, for Col Aldrin, was the beginning of another odyssey which would lead him out of the U.S. space program and out of the Air Force, where he had spent all of his adult life.

His Partners

His partners on the historic voyage in July, 1969, have faded from the public's eye. Neil Armstrong, the first man to step on the moon, leads a life of relative obscurity as a professor at the University of Cincinnati,

Michael Collins, who stayed in the command ship while Mr. Armstrong and Coi, Aldrin walked on the moon briefly joined the U.S. State Department and is now an executive at the Smithsonian

Col. Aldrin left NASA almost a year ago and returned to the Air Force as commandant of the Aerospace Research Pilot School at Edwards Air Force Base Calif

"I speak for myself, of course, but I think the others would agree that everything was fine until spleahdown. We had been so busy preparing to go to the moon that we were unprepared for the impact the trip would have on our lives.

- Not Lifelike

"I remember, just as we were finishing our public relations trip around the world, I remarked that the long biological isolation after splashdown was heaven compared to what was happening now and we all agreed," He speaks of his decade as an astronaut without rancor or bitterness and says he would do it all over again Yet when he contemplates the experience, it is almost with a sense of wonderment that he got through it at all.

"I remember one day picking up a copy of Life magazine with a story on us in it. They owned the rights to our personal stories during the flights and the stories about our families. I remember reading the story and thinking. If only it was really like that. Here were all the happy contented wives and children smiling out from happy backyards with husbands standing proudly

Well, the fact is that the husband probably flew halfway across the country to pose for the picture, the kids were half strangers to him and the wife was scared to death about any number of things. We were portrayed as perfect all-Amer-

"Well, all-American maybe, but not perfect. There's no such thing. We had problems just as everyone does. The pressure to excel, to accomplish, was intense. So was the wear and tear of internal politics and rivalry. Feeds existed in the space program just as they do everywhere.

"The wives? Let's face it. Virtually all of them are service wives, a long and honorable tradition. My mother was one and so is my wife. There was no way to prepare them for what they would go through. There were special anxieties connected with sitting at home with television cameras and newspapermen on the front lawn waiting for something to go wrong. And then they'd have to go out and confront these people and one and all they said, 'I'm thrilled, proud and happy.' Joan did it too, but later she told me she had lied without realizing it.

. Hazards for Kids

The hazards for kids having an astronaut fether are worth mentioning too. We are apart even more than most busy fathers are separated from their children. Then, the kids would have to reconcile that smiling, perfect guy they saw on television they knew was their dad with that exhausted inattentive guy who sometimes got home to spend Friday with his family but was sound asleep by 8 o'clock."

Col. Aldrin graduated third in his class at West-Point and has a doctor's degree in astronautics from Massachusetts Institute of Technology-but the perils of a public life can be extreme, even for such a highly trained person.

An intent listener and an intense talker, he is easily at home in the jargon of his special technology yet uncomfortable with the imprecise language of philosophy. But he spoke willingly about his unusual journey since returning from

I am proud of my recovery performance and my accomplishments since this experience, but concerned that too few people, in light of recent events, realize what happened.

We Got to Be Bock-Solid' "Astronauts are chosen for a number of reasons, but a major factor is our stability. We've got to be rock-solid in the head. But what's happened to me can happen to anyone. Can and does. It sounds like a cliche, but I'm a much better man for my down-and-up experiences. "I don't think any of us really knew how to handle it. The day I had to address Congress I was petrified. Landing on the moon was child's play compared to it. I suppose that's how I'm different -I really would have preferred

I noticed changes in myself. I wasn't functioning at anywhere near my usual level. I had always been a self-starter, but now I needed someone to point me and teli ms where to go. Our profession requires constant study and work. It was too competitive to get behind. Instead, we became public personages, the guys who simply had to attend such and such a convention or banquet. We became public relations men for the space program. We ceased astronauts in the technical sense the day our post-flight debriefing ended.

"I have spent my life involved in technology and aerospace. The change didn't suit me-I don't think it suited any of us. I decided to go back to the Air Force where all that I knew was still useful, or so I believed at the time. I also hoped sometime to be promoted to brigadier general. To be a general you must command and I didn't do much commanding at NASA."

Shortly after he became commandant of the serospace school at Edwards, Col. Aldrin says he "just sort of gradually unwound. I virtually ceased to function for brief periods of time and I couldn't get organized.

less a U.S. surrender than the rectification of nearly a generation of unrealistic American policy toward Peking.

It can be plausibly argued, therefore, that the President and his national security adviser, Henry Kissinger, were compelled to give more to the Chinese than they received precisely because the American decision to break two decades of deadlocked relations with the Peking regime was so long overdue. Ironically, Mr. Nixon himself, as a senator and later as Vice-President, had been among the conservatives who, back in the 1950s, vociferonsly equated any effort at a reconciliation with the Communists as treason. So there is a certain justification in the Chinese contention that the United States is now correcting its past "errors." Or as one Chinese, commenting on yesterday's outcome of the summit, said: "We don't owe the Americans anything, but the Americans owe us much. Now they are redressing the balance." The President's major concession to the Communists was a public pledge for the first time by the United States to withdraw all American forces and military installations from Taiwan, the island stronghold of Chiang Kaishek's rival Nationalist govern-that the United States "does not challenge" Peking's claim that Talwa. is Chinese territory, and that there is only one China. He further reaffirmed that the Taiwan question should be resoived "by the Chinese themselves." thereby emphasizing that the United States no longer bears responsibility for the problem.

These U.S. positions thus concede to the Communists what they have been requesting for vears. Moreover, in a complicated bit of diplomatic aleight of hand the President and Mr. Rissinger also shrouded the American defense commitment to Taiwan m ambiguity. Speaking to newsmen in Shanghai yesterday, Mr. Kissinger asserted that the cefense treaty with Taiwan "will be maintained." But this is contradicted by the passage in the summit com-munique that describes Talwan as Chinese territory. For unless the administration intends to go back to the fiction that Chisng Kaishek represents all China, which he plainly does not, the United States cannot maintain a defense commitment to a province of a country.

In principle at least, then, the President met the demands put forth by Premier Chou En-lai in a banquet speech last Monday. the day the summit opened in Peking. In return, the Chines agreed in somewhat diluted fashion to Mr. Nizon's proposals for scientific. sports, cultural and journalistic exchanges as well as bilateral trade. They also agreed, more cautiously than the President had anticipated, to receiving a nior" U.S. diplomatic representative in Peking "from time to time" to discuss these and other subjects. Concessions Weighed

Although Mr. Kissinger warned reporters against counting "who scored how many points on which issue," the President's concessions to the Chinese clearly outweighed their concessions to him. The Chinese had the advantage from the start, for one good reason. They perceived that Mr. Nixon's intention to turn his China trip into a television spectacular would create expectations at home that he would In other words, they shrewdly calculated that the President would be anxious, after all the electronic publicity he had generated, to bring some kind of accord back to Washington. Hence they apparently hoisted him on his own tube by compelling him to acquiesce to their demands in order to leave China with an agreement. It was their mittal experience in television diplomacy, in short, and they performed brilliantly. They gradually brightened the spotlight on the President, first with an audience with Mao Psetung, then with a splash in their media and later by displaying him to the public. Like other alien chieftains who have visited the Central Kingdom since the dawn of history. Mr. Nixon seems to have discovered by the weekend that he had been drawn deeper into the Chinese web than he had antioinsted. When a President stays up until 5 am to work on a communiqué, as Mr. Nixon did on Saturday, he is obviously fighting to defend his position.

Still, to view the result of the summit as a "sellout" by the President would be a mistake Loopholes Noted

In the first place, the final communique contains a good deal of loopholes and escape hatches through which Mr. Nixon can crawl should be regard Peking's future conduct to be disappointing. For example, his pledge to withdraw U.S. forces and military installations from Taiwan is termed an "ultimate objective. In addition, the communique states that the troop pullout from the island is contingent upon the reduction of tension in the area"—a vague phrase that the administration can define as it pleases. Meanwhile, the Chinese agreement to "facilitate" scientific. also worded cautiously to permit Peking to improve its relations with the United States in small doses. The same is true for their ement to receive a "senior" U.S. diplomatic emissary.

This suggests, consequently, that both sides are going to be feeling their way in the months ahead. Mr. Kissinger stressed this in his recommendation to newsmen to interpret the communique "in terms of the direction to which it seeks to point." More significantly, perhaps, the summit was not capitulation by the President to the Communists because there was simply no other way for the United States to reach an accommodation with the People's Republic of China. One side had to give After more than two decades of pursuing an illusory China policy, the administration had no choice-unless, like its predecessors, it preferred to continue the myth that the Communists did not exist Trus the summit should be viewed as a beginning of a process. Despite all the contrived fanfare, it was a tough beginning, But as the Mao poem advised the President did "seize : the

Auto Makers Given U.S. Option Un Safety Device

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP). The Department of Transportstion has changed its auto-safety rules, allowing manufacturers to use passive-restraint systems for passengers as a substitute for enition locks connected to seatbelt use next year.

Under previous standards, cars had to be equipped by Aug. 15, 1973, with a locking system making it impossible to start a car unless front-seat belts were hooked up, a department spokesman

But under the revision, auto makers may provide passive pro-tection—such as air cushions—for front-seat passengers starting Aug. 15, 1973. Unaffected is the Aug. 15, 1975, deadline when all cars must have passive protection

B. A. Boaz, a department spokesman, said the new stan-dards will allow car makers an option, to phase passive protection into production.

We decided that it is impossible to ask the auto industry to put 10 million air cushions in cars at one time," Mr. Boaz said. "We're giving them the opportunity to begin it earlier. It's a production problem, not a scientilic or technical problem."

Liability of Industry, Government Studied

By Ben A. Franklin CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 28 NYT) -A rash of questions arose in this coal-industry center today about the legal liability and moral accountability of the government and the mining industry for catastrophes like the one at the Logan County hollow, where at least 66 men, women and children are known to have drowned. There appeared to be little prospect that specific responsibility for yesterday's disaster could be fixed on anyone, as is common in coal-field disasters. In a statement in Washington today, the U.S. Geological Survey said that lack of federal or state regulation of coal-industry water impoindments has made the hazards of such dam failures "common" throughout the Appalachian coal fields. The survey cited three other dam fallures in the Logan and Mingo County areas of West Virginia since 1966. Warning Reported

There were reports that local officials of the Pittston Co., the New York-based conglomerate group of Americans without a that owns the Buffalo Mining Co. based at Lorado, had been warned early Saturday that the company's crudely made waste-pile dam was being endangered by heavy rains.

The embankment broke later Saturday morning, letting loose a smashing torrent of water on half-a-dozen coal miners' communities in the valley below.

U.S. Bureau of Mines officials in Washington said today that the Lorado dam, built across the mouth of a hollow about 15 years ago, using slate and other waste material from a nearby coal-cleaning plant, had contained an impoundment of thick, black, slitladen cleaning-plant wash water, 1,000 feet in width and one-anda-half to two miles in length. The impoundment was described as 50 feet deep at the foot of the dam. Tragic Mistake Federal mining officials, while acknowledging that "someone made a tragic mistake," said they were unsure that any law had been violated.

An obscure section of the twoyear-old Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act provides that a coal-mine settling basin or other surface water impoundment that is deemed a "hazard" shall "be inspected at least once a week" by officials of the company responsible for it, a Bureau of Mines spokesman said.

"There's no question now that this one created a hazard," the spokesman said. "But the ques-tion as far as enforcement goes now is whether anyone could have known it was a hazard until Sat-

The China Trip

"A trip to China is like going to the moon"-President Nixon, in his Man of the Year interview with Time magazine.

"Where an event is a great event it does not need a lot of rhetoric. Where you need a lot of rhetoric, a lot of jazz, a lot of flamboyance, is when you don't have much to sell." -Mr. Nixon, in the same interview.

We cite these thoughts of President Nixon not in any effort to denigrate his trip to China or what he may have accomplished there, but because we think there is much truth in them which has some relevance to what has and hasn't happened this past week in Peking. To begin with, it was undeniably a "great event." We can be sure that things will never be the same again between the United States and the People's Republic of China, or between both countries and Russia, or between us and Japan, and the rest of Asia—and certainly between us and Chiang Kai-shek. An opening exists where there has not been one for 22 years; a beginning has been made; the potential is vast and for this much the President is entitled to great credit, for it was a bold stroke, skillfully brought off by painstaking and clandestine preparations tracing back to the beginning of Mr. Nixon's term.

In this sense, it was something like going to the moon. It was a daring and dramatic voyage, long in the making, which produced an authentic First. But it was also like a moonshot in other ways: By his own choice, the President made it a TV spectacular; yet, apart from the spine-tingling touchdown at Peking airport of the Spirit of '76, the first fateful, presidential footfall on Chinese soil, the opening banquet and the other touristic highlights, it was not, in its essence, a visual event. What millions of Americans were witnessing was merely the outward, symbolic expression of decisions taken secretly by both countries months ago, and profound and amorphous geopolitical shiftings which can only be dimly perceived or understood, let alone transmitted through a television tube. In their substantive preoccupations, the President and his aides became shadowy figures, bounding off unseen on diplomatic probes. And so the voids were filled, as television must fill them, with pageantry and Peking cityscapes and badminton matches and, in large measure, banalities. We saw some splendid sights and learned some history and shared the sense of barriers breaking down. We also learned, among other things, that Bob Haldeman is a tireless taker of home movies and, from Barbara Walters. that "the people all say (all 800 million of them?) that their life is better now than it was in the days of the landlords." But there was no way to see what really was happening in those 15 critical hours of conversations behind closed doors; you cannot simulate a diplomatic docking as it were, between President Nixon and Chairman Mao. So as the week wore on, and the bloom wore oil, the necessity for so much secrecy became a burning issue and in the absence of substance what we were getting was in fact a large dose of rhetoric, flamboyance and jazz. There will be more of the same, one would imagine, with the President's re-entry and splashdown Monday night, which will presumably come in the form of a nationally-televised presidential report.

And then what? The astronauts bring back rocks for expert analysis but these have not yet unlocked the secrets of the universe and the public interest in moonshots is, by all indications, on the wane. The President has brought back a communique, which will similarly be worked over by the experts, and the pickings, we would judge, will likewise be relatively slim. It will be argued by some that Mr. Nixon has performed too sweeping a kowtow, that in his eagerness to produce something of substance he has bartered away our commitment to Nationalist China-with his promise of total military withdrawal from Taiwan and his concession that "There is but one China and that Taiwan is a part of China"-for rather modest gains: cultural and scientific exchanges; sporadic, highlevel diplomatic contacts; and increased trade. Others will doubtless question his literal acceptance of the Bandung principles of peaceful co-existence which the Chinese themselves inspired in 1955 and which this country has refused to embrace until now. There is a danger, in short, of a disillusionment on the part of some which could be as damaging, in its way, as the euphoria which the President has done so much to inspire.

There are two things to be said, it seems to us, about giving way at this point either to a morning-after depression or to visions of that generation of peace that Mr. Nixon would have us accept as the inevitable consequence of his journey to Peking. First. we would simply repeat the warning: Don't. jump to conclusions; spirits, whether of Geneva or Camp David or Hollybush-or Peking-can prove evanescent; there are too many uncertainties. If this tells us anything about summit meetings it is that you cannot measure their impact quickly, or reliably; we have Yalta, Geneva, the Nassau meetings between President Kennedy and Prime Minister Maemillan, and perhaps most tellingly the Kennedy-Khrushchev meeting in Vienna to testify to that. Just as we could not tell until the Cuban missile crists a year later how badly Mr. Khrushchev had misread Mr. Kennedy, so we cannot begin to know now how well, or badly, the Chinese may have read Mr. Nixon, or what the Russians will read into the Peking summit, or what the impact will be on other leaders in other

The second thing we would say on first reading is that Mr. Nixon, in his concessions to the Chinese, has probably paid a heavy, but not unreasonable, price for the excesses of American foreign policy in the postwar years; that this was a payment made higher by the fact that it was long overdue; that it will be painful for many Americans in the short run; but that it may well be richly profitable in the long run, if for no other reason than because we may now come to perceive more clearly an Asian order of priorities and power realities, which will enable us to approach our role in the world in general, and the problem of our disengagement from Vietnam in particular, in more realistic terms. It will not be easy for the President to square the downgrading of this country's obligation to Chiang Kai-shek with an overly rigid, excessively protective attitude toward President Thieu, or to reconcile an open-ended struggle in Vietnam for the larger purpose of containing China, with the "peaceful coexistence" now subscribed to by

But neither will it be easy for him to make the most of what he has achieved in Peking if he continues to overstate_or misstate_ the foresecable gains. "This was the week we changed the world," he declared in Shanghai, as his visit ended, and nobody would deny him that. Whether, as ho went on to say, "Generations in the years ahead will look back and thank us for this meeting," is something nobody can know. It is enough, for now, to acknowledge a great avent, which speaks for itself, and speaks well for the President. To embellish it with rhetoric and flamboyance and jazz, as Mr. Nixon has himself suggested, is to encourage the suspicion that he doesn't have all that

More Weight in Moscow

It would be naive to conclude from the new Sino-American contacts that a "reversal of alliances" has taken place, or may do so. What is happening is rather a correction of the international balance, stimulated by the arms buildup and maritime expansion of the Soviet Union, for whom nuclear parity with America is obviously not enough and which produced more raw steel than the U.S. for the first time in 1971. Nixon may rightfully hope that his appearance in Moscow will carry more weight now that he has initiated a search for a modus vivendl with Peking and has again displayed the American flag in the Indian Ocean and the Eastern Mediterranean.

Nixon's Visit to China

The dawn of the new Sino-American friendship and the disruption it is causing in the balance of international forces are events so considerable that their repercussions are bound to be felt by the old nations of our continent. And to affect their current evolution toward unity. It is true that the Europe of the Six and that of the Ten soon to be born are still only a geographic expression. Mainly a community of culture, this Europe is seeking through convergent economic interests a unity of political views without which its future would be precarious.

comflict in some region of the United States explodes in violence so serious that the federal government sends in troops, then begins arresting blacks suspected of terrorism. Under a special keep-the-peace law it holds 100,000 blacks in prison camps without trial or charges. And all this arouses little public or political criticism outside the affected region.

Some blacks, arrested by the Army, take their case to the Supreme Court and win: The court holds the law giving the Army special powers unconstitutional. But on the night of that decision a constitutional amendment to reverse it is pushed through both houses of Congress by overwhelming majorities; in the Senate there is just one vote against. And again this attracts no more criticism than an occasional newspaper editorial.

Unimaginabla? Americans may think so. But in Britain some-thing very like that scenario has happened and is happening right now. The parallel is rough, but it is there.

In Northern Ireland, with a population of 1.5 million, there are now 793 Roman Catholica held in prison or detention camps without charge. A high court decision finding unlawful some of the regulations under which the army exercises police powers has just been reversed by Parlisment in a single night, with little expression of public or political

Complacency

The surprise in all this is not the horror of events in Ulsterthat is not new-but the com-placency of the British reaction to it. When soldiers shoot 13 civilians dead in Londonderry or an IRA bomb kills seven in a British Army camp, the headlines are big. But there is no outcry, no sense even of real unease among the public at the Irish situation in general: not at the gross injustice of internment, not at the scary spectacle of Parliament making constitutional changes in a night, with no chance for public debate.

No American is in a position to take a high moral tone about British policy in Northern Ireland. In World War II, the United States interned thousands of Americans of Japanese ancestry despite the Constitution and the Supreme Court. Nor do the irrationalities, the murdering hatreds, the historical emotions of Ireland permit of any pat solu-

But it is in fact hard to imaginc events of such constitutional import as Britain has seen lately occurring in the United States without the deepest evidence of public concern, political action and legal protest. America has terrible problems, and it has made appalling mistakes, but it is not short of concerned people.

Smugness is a fault long laid to the British. It is the other side of the traditional virtues: the stiff upper lip, sang-froid, all that sort of thing. Coolness in the face of difficulties is admirable, and the British still have it but to those who expect passion on passionate subjects they can be maddening.

It is not just Ireland by any means. On the question of the environment, for example, there is an Establishment attitude suggesting that Britain has really solved those problems all that

This type of behavior is encouraged by present tax laws and trade policies. More shocking yet is the fact that modern ology, often developed with the substantial participation of U.S. tax dollars is licensed abroad at the expense of domestic em-

The Foreign Trade and Investment Act of 1972, which I have introduced in the Senate, is designed to put our domestic industry on an even footing with the foreign competition, make domestic investment just as attractive as investment abroad and assure America of full employment with a diversified production base.

At present, our tax laws make an overseas investment more attractive than one in Indiana. For example, profits sarned by a foreign subsidiary of an American firm are not taxed until they are repatriated. To the extent that the firm does pay taxes to a foreign government, these taxes count as a dollar-for-dollar credit against any federal tax

Profits made in Indiana are taxed when earned. And taxes paid to the State of Indiana can only be taken as a deduction against gross income rather than as a federal tax credit. The Foreign Trade and Investment Act will ping both these gaping loopholes through which Amerlean capital, technology and jobs have noured. Although most countries reg-ulate their technology and carefully control outflows of capital, America has largely left these matters in private hands. This has led to a recent outrage in which American multinational firms contributed to the fall of the dollar by pursuing their own corporate ends in international currency speculation. That was only the most visible example of a new phase in corporate

The Foreign Trade and Invest-ment Act brings some stability to this anarchic situation. Taking 1985-69 as a base period, the average amount of imports for each good will be computed and compared to the average level of domestic production over that

The relationship of imports to domestic production over this period will determine the percentage share of imports in future years. The world of the 1970s is vastly different from preceding eras. Transportation costs have plummeted downward, communications are vastly improved multinational organizations and corporations abound, and most countries are pursuing nationalistic trade policies or seeking to industrialize behind carefully designed tartif walls. Yet critica of the Foreign Trade and Investment Act do not seem cog-were shot dead today as they led a desperate nine-hour room-to-room battle inside a mountainside house to rescue a housewife held hostage by leftist gunmen.

The five gunmen had held off 1,500 police for 10 days in the longest siege in Japanese criminal history. But the police finally battered their way into the threestory house with a crane-operated steel ball that ripped out part of the wall and roof.

They poured tons of water through the holes from powerful jets until it cascaded out of windows on the other side of the house and kept the rooms almost continuously filled with clouds of choking tear gas from a steady barrage of grenades.

Special squads stormed in from several directions as the gunmen, members of the Unified Red Army urban guerrillas, fought back with gunfire and home-made available.

A superintendent and an inspector were shot in the face and killed, and eight more policemen were wounded, several seriously, before the gunmen were over-powered as they attempted to use housewife Yasuko Muta as a human shield in their final repair, a third-story bedroom.

Mrs. Muta, 31, who suffers from anemia, was said to be in satisfactory condition, although she had not eaten for three days. The guerrilias took her prisoner on Feb. 19 as they fled from a gun battle with police comb-ing the mountains around this central Japanese resort for sus-pected hideouts of leftist groops. The Unified Red Army has been blamed for a number of bomb explosions and armed robberies in the past year.

It was responsible for a hijacking in April, 1970, when nine sword-wielding youths forced a Japanese airliner to fly to North Korea. The nine are still believed to be living there. Police ordered today's all-out

By Church

WARSAW, Feb. 28 (UPI).—. Poland's Communist leadership, in a major concession to the Cutholic Church, has abolished a law requiring hishops to keep inventories of all church assets, a church spokesman said today. "The state has come to the conclusion that the regulation is wrong and abolished it," the spokesman said-The government's decision was second major concession to the church in 13 months, and the first to result from churchstate negotiations. The government newspaper Slowo Powzechne said the decision was "another act of good-will on the part of the state, which is an essential factor on the path of normalization of church-state relations." Although the law, passed in 1962, was never actually imple-mented—bishops stead(astly refused to provide the inventori efforts to enforce it contributed to the worsening of churchstate relations. Also, the regime imposed higher taxes on church property.

Steps to end the church-state fend began in January, 1971, after Edward Gierek took over as Polish Communist party leader from Wladyslaw Gomulka

First, the government announc-ed the restoration of thousands of churches in former German territories to Catholic rule. Previously, the state had considered them World War II booty and rented them to the church. The church responded by anthorizing Bishop Bronislaw Dabrowski, secretary of the Polish episcopate, to start talks with the Gierek government. Western diplomats said today the government's decision to re-voke the inventory law, which was a major obstacle to improved church-state relations, indicat-ed rapid progress towards ending the church-state feud. In return for the government concessions, Polish Primate Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski has ceased his repeated attacks on Po-

Sir Alec Opens Talks in Spain On Gibraltar

MADRID, Feb. 28 (Renters),-British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home today opened exploratory talks with Spain on the dispute over Gibraltar.

Sir Alec, who arrived here last night for a three-day official visit at the invitation of Spanish Foreign Minister Gregorio Lopez Bravo, was said by informed sour-ces to have come here to listen to Spanish views on how the dispute could be settled. He was said not to intend to present any new ideas of his own.

According to the sources, it was felt better to begin exploratory talks in Madrid, as suggested by Mr. Lopez Bravo six months ago as a means of "thinking together" on the issue, rather than to allow the two-year-old deadlock to

Tonight, at a dinner in honor of Sir Alec, Mr. Lopez Bravo declared that Spain was ready to seek a solution to the Gibraltar problem that "would safeguard the interests of the inhabitants of the colony. Sir Alec replied that a quick

Britain to Close Busiest Abortion Clinic Next Week

LONDON, Feb. 28 (AP).—The government today ordered Brit-ain's busiest abortion clinic to close next week. The move was seen as a bid to stem the rapid increase in pregnancy termina tions since abortion became legal-ly easier to obtain in 1968.

Health Minister Sir Keith Joseph said the Langham Street Clinic in the Marylebone district of London would not have its license renewed when it expires next Monday. Sir Keith said the River Park Nursing Home, near Leamington Spa; m Warwickshire, would also be removed from the list of approved abortion clinics.

A spokesman of the Langham Street Clinic, which has carried out more than 27,000 abortions since the 1968 abortion act, said the clinic planned to appeal against the minister's decision. Abortion figures for 1971 have not been officially released yet but they are expected to be

Kennedy Fires New Blast at U.K. on Ulster

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (Reuters).—Sen Edward M. Kennedy. D. Mass., unleashed a bitter at-tack on the British government today, labeling the killing of Catholies in Londonderry as Brit-ain's My Lai and calling for the immediate withdrawal of its troops from Ulster.

The senator's onslaught came as the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Europe opened hearings on a resolution, cosponsored by Sen. Kennedy and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D., Conn., calling for a British pullout, an end to internment without trial, the dissolution of Stormoot (Northern Treland's parliament) and the eventual unification of Ireland.

Sen. Kennedy said the United States can no longer stand by and do nothing in the face of daily killing and brutality.

"For hundreds of years, Ircland has seemed an incurable and interminable plague on Britain, destined to bring constant turmoil to unending generations of British and Irish people and their leaders," declared Sen. Kennedy is his strongest attack to date on British policies in Ulster. He said that even if he were not of Irish descent and a Catholic, he would still feel compelled to speak out against British actions in Northern Ireland, as he has spoken out against actions in Vietnam, Biatra, the Middle East and Bangladesh.

He scoffed at the Nixon administration's argument that it should not involve itself in the affairs of Britain, noting that the United States quickly prodded Britain when its military base on Malta was in jeopardy. "Why is it so slow to act on Ulster now, where basic human rights and the lives of innocent people are in the balance?" he If an excuse was needed, be continued, the Nixon administration could cite the existence of a U.S. naval communications station on the outskirts of Londonderry and the fact that the 14. 000 British troops in Ulster could be better used to free Americau troops from duty with NATO.

The two women, who had come to La Paz to aid French attempts to extradite a German-born Bolivian citizen, Klaus Altmann, who is accused of being Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie, were expected to leave the country today. Mrs. Klarsfeld, 33, and her com-

As the 282,000 miners returned to their jobs, most industrial plants resumed full production. Many had been on a three-day week because of power reductions caused by fuel shortages.

The new laws, if in effect earlier, could have been invoked to try to check the strike or to question the legality of controversial picketing L; miners, which kept fuel from getting to electricity power stations. The legislation, often compared with the Taft-Hartley law in the United States, was first seen prmcipally as a weapon against a rash of unofficial strikes. But Conservative spokesmen emphasize its importance as a framework law providing rights as well as penalties.

A gentle old man, Prof. Coghill said Burton was only 18 then "but I knew right away that he would become a wonderful actor."

There were two parties, one on Saturday night, the other one last night. But the first one, held in a cobwebbed cellar with suits of armor decorated with red roses and white calls lilies, was the best.

Guests were handed candles as they went downstairs and made their way to the buffet loaded with rustic food such as goulash soup, sauerkraut and sausages. As this party was in-formal, Princess Grace wore a black pants suit but Elizabeth Taylor had on a low-cut caftan to show off her drop-dead sapphire. She had even a bigger one on her finger.

Art in Germany: James Rosenquist in Retrospective

COLOGNE, West Germany, Feb.

28 (IET).—Spaghatti, part of a face, the front of a car-I Love You With My Ford." A smiling Kennedy, a hand holding pieces of cake, the side and front Wheel of a car-"President Elect."

These bits and pieces of a consumer world by James Rosenquist blend together to give a literal panorame of our time. His objects are so exact and enermous that they attack the viewer, seem to drop out of the picture and despite his exactness-slip out of focus. Everything is put under the viewer's mose—the dishes in the dishwasher, the grapefruit on a plate, lips, eyes, hands and the ever-present spa-

Rosenguist's world is aggressive only at first sight. Wandering through his first European retrospective, at the Kunsthalle here, does not leave you in despair. His is not the kind of realism that makes one shiver. His objects are aggressive in that he wants to make one conscious of them, but they are not brutal. It is a rather cheerful world. There is Joan Crawford opening her mouth for one of those stopid advertising alogans; everyone knows that it is not to be taken seriously.

Spaghetti Mystery

for mystery in everything. Rosen-quist tried to escape them ("If you paint Franco-American spaghetti, they won't make a cru-cifizion out of it . . "). He was Rosenquist started by painting billboards in Times Square, and he never denies this beginning. Now 38, and one of the most prominent pop artists, he has influenced the sharp-focus realism (pop art, phase 2) that has taken over in New York.

Seeing 58 paintings, as well as most of his graphics and watercolors, here is to know him. Here is a superb technician who obviously enjoys painting. In a way, all his. works are alike, but they never bore. In each new com-bination of objects and colors, Rosenquist testifies to the things that surround him-quick flashes of a lot of things I'm angry about,

Detail from "F-111" . by James Resenquist

He does not agree with those who say that his works are just imitations of reality. "If I have three things, their relationship will be the subject matter. But the content will, bopefully, be fatter, balloon to more than the subject matter"

There is too much good-humored frony in his paintings, too much fun to be had in looking at them, to take him as the gloomy prophet of a decadent world. Even his largest picture— "F-111"-does not make him engagé in a political sense. He is made of 51 pieces, portraying the controversial U.S. Air Force super-jet. Around the jet; among other objects, is a smiling child under a hair dryer, light bulbs and an atomic explosion behind an umbrella. A breathtaking and colorful marathon, but not, as Max Kozloff called it, a second "Guernica."

"F-111" is 30 yards long and

"Originally the picture was an idea of fragments of visions being sold, uncompleted fragments . . ." Rosenquist explained. "Then anyone interested in buying a blank part of this, knowingly or un-knowingly-that's the joke-ha would think he is buying art and. after all, he would just be buying a thing that paralleled part of the life he lives." His pictures are part of the life we liveand they are fun.

After Cologne, the show is going to the Whitney Museum in New York, then Chicago and Passidens.

A Parisian House of Good Beer

By Jon Winroth

PARIS, Feb. 28 (IHT).-Opposite the Gare du Nord where the trains come in from Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Scandinavia is a likely spot for an establishment specializing in beer. And there it is—Le Petit Namur or La Maison de la Bonne Bière, as it styles itself.

It has 40 teers on hand from 11 countries, including Japan, but then the surprises begin. To get the unpleasant aspects out of the way, it is a small, noisy, nondescript modern har whose decor includes a jukebox and two pinball machines.

All this paraphernalia was inherited by the present proprietor, Jeanne Borot, who intends to dispose of it as soon as she can afford to redecorate.

She is enthusiastic and highly knowledgeable about heer, which she drinks all day long, although she is as trim as they come. She is proud of her membership in the Ordre de la Chope d'Or (golden mug), the only French beer society (there are

Mrs. Borot will tell you that beer was the object of the first European pure food law still in force. In 1487, Duke Albrecht IV of Bavaria decreed that every brewer in Munich must swear to use only water, barley, hops and yeast in making beer, and in 1516, this edict was extended to all

"Without Apparent Motive," a

French whodunit directed by Philippe Labro, starring Jean-Louis Trintignant and Dominique Sanda, got a fair review in The Times. "It takes a long time for a connected series of five murders to unravel and even longer for a detective to wrap it up." Howard Thompson writes. "The picture runs only 102 minutes and is still too long, even with that many corpses. Yet the design of murder and the interesting denouement are both credible and original and worth the wait-out. Mr. Labro also extracts good, terse performances from his players. Dominique Sanda is properly enigmatic. As for Erich Segal. that Love Story man, the American writer has a brief acting stint and does it well If only the picture were as succinct." The movie is based on Ed Mo-Bain's novel "Tan Plus One."

"Outback," directed by Ted Kotcheff, screenplay by Evan Jones, based on a novel by Kenneth Cook, was praised by Times-man Roger Greenspun: "Among its strengths I should have to include a sense of general foreboding that crystalizes often enough into particular terror and that is not quite like anything else I can remember feeling at the movies. although science-fiction films come closest to it. Here all that really shows is a society bored to its heels, forced into friendliness, addicted to stupid but goodharmored gambling, and absolute-

Plays

"Moonchildren," at Broadway's Royale Theater, split the critics but was enthusiastically endorsed by Clive Barnes in The New York Times. "Once in a while a play manages to provide an epitaph for its time. Sometimes it is a great play such as The Cherry Orchard. At other times it is a less than great play. But in each instance the playwright takes a time and a place and sums it up. This happened in a bitterly funny and funnily bitter play by Michael Weller called 'Moonchildren' The time is 1965-66, and the play a university town set deep in the soul of L.B.J.'s America. But this is nn naturalistic picture of students in 1965. It is rather a witty and very humans commentary on them."

In contrast, Associated Press critic William Glover was unimpressed: "This is the sort of play, brimming with youthful incoherence and existential absurdity that was Off-Broadway style a few seasons back. Distilled down to its modest substance, it might be an interesting one-act diver-

"Sleep," a play by Jack Gelber, directed by Jacques Levy at the American Place Theater, got a mixed review in The Times. Clive Barnes: "For any play to be set in an experimental steep labora-tory is playing with fire as well as with sleep. For critics, so many plays actually are experimental sleep laboratories that this new play might be thought to be underlining the obvious. However, Mr. Gelber, in his first outing here since The Cuban Thing' some four years ago, is concerned with the nature of sleep, the effect of sleep and what might be very well called the psychopathology of dreams. Gil is a failure. For reasons never quite clear, Gil becomes a guinea pig in a sleep laboratory. But the concept of the play is a great deal better than the play itself. Gil is a modern Babbitt of minimal interest, and his dreamlife seems no more interesting than his reality. Jacques Levy staged

Capital Spending

Seen Rising 11%

By Herbert Kosheiz NEW YCRE, Feb. 28 (NYT), -U.S. industry has raised its sights for capital spending this year, McGraw-Hill Publications

A recherk of plans for im-proving plant and equipment indicates that business will spend

$90.75 billion for this purpose in 1972, an increase of 11 percent from the level of estimated spending plans indicates a resurgence of confidence in the economy, according to Douglas Green-wald, chief economist for the business publishers.

The elimination of many of the uncertainties that plagued

American business during Phase

1 and Phase 2 of the President's program, plus shifting economic and political factors, have resulted in an improved level of business confidence, he said.

Investment on Increase

The 11 percent increase now planned is 4 percent increase now planned is 4 percentage points higher than businessmen expected in the fall survey taken hy McGraw-Hill, and 2 percentage points higher than dollar expenditures projected in a survey level.

y last November and December

by the Department of Commerce and the Securities and Exchange

The increase in spending plans results mainly from upward revisions by the non-manufacturing segments of industry. Since October, according to McGraw-ing in 1971.

Japan May Lend Some Reserves To Businessmen

TORYO, Feb. 28 (AP-DJ) — Japan is thinking of trying to solve its problem of rapidly mounting foreign exchange reserves by lending some of them to businessmen for investment overseas, Kyodo news service reported over the weekend.

Japan's foreign currency reserves now total about $15.9 billion and are expected to keep

Quoting informed sources, Kyodo said the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MIII) recently started talks with the Finance Ministry on the plan to establish a "foreign currency investment and loan account" for some of the nation's foreign currency holdings.

The report said two advantages any boom in are seen—slowing the buildup of future," he said. and making the most of the currency reserves by promoting cur-rently lagging private Japanese projects to develop economic resources overseas and cooperation in the economic development of developing nations.

Sharp Gain Set By Leading Index

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP-DJ).—A good report on the health of the U.S. economy came today with a Commerce Department statement that the composite index of leading business indicators gained a sharp 2.3 percent in January.

The index is considered one of the more important economic in-dicators. Its components cover a broad spectrum of the economy and its movements send to herald the economy's future direction. Today's gain, carrying the index to 134.8 percent of the 1967 average, followed a downward-revised increase of : 2 percent in December, and was surpassed only by the rise of 2.5 perceot in Oc-tober, 1958, according to Harold C. Passer, assistant commerce secretary for economic affairs. Last month, six of the eight available .eading indicators improved. Improvements were shown by the measure of initial claims for unemployment insurance, stock prices, new orders for dnrables, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, industrial naterials prices and the priceabor cost ratio.

Declines were registered in the average work week and in build-

Labor Leader Hits Wage Rise Given to Painters

WASHINGTON, Peb. 28 (AP-DJ).—A deep crack developed in labor's united approach to gov-erament wage controls as a key union leader on the Pay Board sharply attacked the wage increases being approved for con-struction workers.

I, W. Abel, president of the United Steelworkers Union, ap-parently shocked many union officials by complaining in a tele-gram to his 14 Pay Board col-lengues that the construction industry stabilization committee is approving numerous building trades pacts that go beyond the Pay Board's guidelines.

Noting that the board is seek-ing to hold wage boosts to 5.5 percent a year, the head of the largest union in the AFL-CIO protested that the construction panel recently approved a contract that gives a painters union local in Pennsylvania wage and benefit increases totaline 53 percent over three years.

"Such a double standard is indefensible," asserted Mr. Abel.

A CANTER TAKES STRANGE DIRECTIONS...

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

Bad luck stories often turn out to be stories of bad bidding or bad play. However South was entitled to sympathy on the diagramed

His side had to choose between two game contracts, four hearts or five diamonds, each of which offered a 90 percent chance. He chose hearts, the better match point contract, and was beaten by a combination of a had break and. fine defense—only to find out later that the alternative contract would have succeeded.

South opened one heart and made a jump-shift to three dia-monds after his partner responded one no-trump. North raised to four diamonds. South rebid four hearts to show that his heart suit was strong enough to play opposite modest support, and North rightly passed.

Notice that with normal breaks South can make 11 tricks easily in hearts or diamonds. Thus the actual result was even more disappointing. East and West found the only way to defeat the contract.

West'e lead of the spade king was overtaken by his partner's ace, and East paused to consider the blidding. He could see nine diamonds, and South had bid the suit, so it was virtually sure that West was void. But one ruff was not enough-he needed two. So he returned the diamond jack, a careful suit-preference signal suggesting a re-entry in the higher-ranking side-suit, spaces.

West ruffed and interpreted the signal correctly: his partner must be in a position to win the next spade trick, either with the jack or by ruffing. So West underled his spade queen, East won with the jack and was able to give his

to best the contract.

South's gloom was hardly lightened when he discovered that five diamonds would almost surely have made it. The indicated play in trumps is to start with the king, allowing for a possible void with West.

THE SCORPION GOD: THREE SHORT NOVELS By William Golding. 178 pp. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. $5.95.

Reviewed by Virginia Tiger

ganglia being pushed forward by some intensity, some vision. This is the persistent image that saturates all of William Golding's

Ever since "Lord of the Flies" the focus has remained remarkably consistent all Golding fables concern themselves with man's painful yet triumphant capacity to make intellectual and intuitive leaps beyond his immediate si-tuation. Golding seems to be pre-occupied with those crucial moments in history when consciousness changes unpredictably and finds -itself constructing -its own moral evolution.

Golding's most recent book, "The Scorpion God," consists of three long novellas, one of which, "Envoy Extraordinary," was first published some 15 years ago. (It was also adapted for the Lundon stage under the title "The Brase Butterfly.") Each of the stories cuts a wide and assured sweep into the historical past—as "The Inheritors" so richly revealed in its creation of Nearderthal life, Golding possesses an extraordinary ability to imagine and then populate remote, obscure times. Here, in the little story, we are immediately thrust into the stern sun of an ancient Egypt. "There was not a crack in the sky, not a blemish on the dense blue enamel... Out of this sky, heat and light fell like an avalanche so that everything between the two long cliffs lay motionless as the cliffs themselves." A figure emerges with cross and flail running toward the already dying god-pharach. We watch tha strange preparations for ritual death, the orginatic validation of the royal daughter, and listen to a character called the Liar whisper obscenities to the court. There is a white land where water becomes as hard as stone he insists. There men marry across "the natural borders of consanguinity." To a civilization that believes that correct sexual relations involve incest, these whispers are indeed blasphemous lies. So too is the Liar's intuitive jump that because of this revolutionary insight he must be the new pharach-god. Etched against the brazen sky he stands at the story's close stinging like a scorpion, gesticulating "the mechanics, the necessity of survival." Golding's scope here is narrow-a danger for a fable writer. But there has been no lapse in creative vitality. There is still the vigorous narrative power, the meticulous control of incident and detail and, above all, the commanding irony which is the mark of Golding in his prime. At first reading, "Clonk Clonk" seems to share the primitive Inheritors," but as the coda end-ing indicates, the scene of the action is Africe, near a hot spring, some 10,000 years ago. Golding seems to see the origins of society in the bounding and ritual displays of male hunters— he calls them the Leopard Men and the passive but more know-

Truckreed skulls on wasp ledgeable hearth-tending of fe-ther podies, men with large males. As the graceful lyric introducing the story makes clear. Golding prefers the lyre to the bow; he prefers the misfit almost-hunter to the commanding executives of the hunting tribe. Above all, the story celeb ates the sacred wisdom of women, in particular the ripening maturity of the head woman of the tribe. He calls her Paim, the namer of women; it is she who gives the novelle its ironic warmth and restrained humor-"Envoy Extraordinary" is another, more trivial, matter: ft comic novella that counterpoints a rational Greek inventor to ? superstitious, urbane Roman emperor. (Apparently the Greek has discovered the steamship, the explosive, and the printing press. There is no pretense at historical authenticity here and one laughs sedately as technological invention is neatly banished from at least one Roman court and the spectacle of change is momentarily checked.

The Spirit of Peking

Peking" has had more of an of their three children and their effect on Americans than anyone would like to admit. For example, my Uncle Leo and Aunt Zelda, who live in Brooklyn, had broken off diplo-matic relations with my Uncle Harry and Aunt Gertrude, who live in New Jersey, about 20 years ago.

No one is quite certain what Buchwald caused the break, though rumor in the family had it that Uncle Harry had sold Uncle Leo some hospital insurance, and Uncle Leo had been nuable to collect on the policy because of some small print which Uncle Harry had neglected to mention to him.

Aunt Zelda called Uncle Harry a crock, and aunt Gertrude declared both Aunt Zelds and Uncle Leo persona non grata in the entire Stale of New Jersey.

The other day Uncle Leo's son Henry pointed out to his parents that if President Nixon could go all the way to Peking to normalize relations with Mao Tse-tung, they could at least take a crack at making peace with Uncle Harry and Aunt Gertrude.

Surprisingly, Uncle Leo and Aunt Zelda agreed to open negotiations, and Henry went on a secret mission to the mainland of New Jersey to arrange the de-

Uncle Harry and Aunt Gertrude agreed to a state visit from Uncie Leo and Aunt Zelds, but they warned Henry not to get his hopes up over one trip. Henry went back to Brooklyn and reported he thought the climate was right for the visit, even if it did no more than break the ice, which New Jersey had a lot of this year,

The date for the historic journey was set for last Sunday. and because of lack of transportation and shortage of accommodations, I was the only newspaperman accredited for the

WASHINGTON-The "Spirit of brought along a staff consisting SDOUGER We arrived at noon, New Jersey time. We were all disappointed to find there were no crowds in the streets as we drove up to the house, but when we got out of the car, Aunt Gertrdode and Uncle Harry were there to greet us with their four children.

We went inside the house, where we were each served a glass of California wine. Since no one had been to New Jersey for 20 years, we were amazed at the many changes that had taken place. Everyone seemed well fed and well clothed, and Aunt Zelda mentioned that Aunt Gertrude had even bought a new sofa since the last time she had been

The first thing on the agenda was dinner, and Annt Gertrude served 14 courses. Uncle Leo and Aunt Zelda pretended they were enjoying every moment of it. though Aunt Zeida had made everyone eat before we left Brooklyn because she said "You never know if they're going to feed you when you go there."

After dinner Uncle Leo made a toast in which he said that it was nice to be in New Jersey again after all those years, and while there were great differences to be settled in the family, particularly the question of type of insurance Uncle Harry sold, he hoped the visit would bring about new relations between them.

Uncle Harry responded by saving that anyone who doesn't read an insurance policy is an idiot, but there are more im-portant things in life than whether you can collect when you go to a hospital.

After the toasts Uncle Harry's nine-year-old granddaughter provided entertainment by playing 14 numbers on the pisno. Uncle Leo and Aont Zelda applauded politely.

The highlight of the trip was a visit to Uncle Harry's "great" well, which he had built in the back of his house to keep his neighbor's dog out. It is four feet high and 30 feet long, and Uncle Leo said he thought it was one of the great wonders of the

Adam— A Literary Cliffhanger

SYNOPSIS: When last seen publicly in the United States, the summer of 1971, Miron Grindes, star of Adam, the literary world's longest-running cliffhanger (36 years) was dangling by a shoestring over a precipice at the University of Rochester. Under one arm was a copy of the quarterly magazine's current. issue (Nos. 355-360), under the other an alpenstock. The shoestring dangerously frayed after three years of use, broke under the strain and Mr. Grindea fell into space. Now

PARIE (IET)—"This is perhaps one of Adam's most perilous departures," Mr. Grindea had written, with remarkable foresight; in his introduction to that issue. He had also characterized it as "ambitions," and it was certainly that How many magazines can you think of offhand that, in a single issue, contain translations of work originally written in San-skrit, Kashmiri, Gujarati, Assamese, Urdu, Talugu, Tamil and Singht, among others of India's 16 literary languages?

Admittedly this was not a typical issue of Adam, in that it was devoted entirely to work from the Indian subcontinent. But it was typical of the ambition, and the andacity, that have carried this ringlish magazine through 36 years—in the littlemagazine world practically a millennium.

Not that Miron Grindea's achievement has gone unsung during all those years. The inside cover of Adam (an acronymfor Arts, Drama, Architecture and Music) quotes such tributes as these:

"The most remarkable one-man performance of our life-"The most remarkable one-man performance of our life-time. No other international magazine can show the same glittering company of contributors. One wonders how Miron Grindea does it—until one meets him. He is enthusiasm per-sonified. There seems to be nothing he camoot ultimately track down."-Oliver Edwards in the (London) Times. Unlike anything else in the London or Paris literary scene."

C. P. Snow in The Author. A glance at some recent issues of the magazine shows that these tributes are neither mere puffs nor hyperbole. (Keeping in mind the stock-in-trade of the average American "little magazine"-indigestible slices of deep-fried pseudo-Faulkner. swatches of imitation Joyce, inept pastiches of Eliot, by writers who are not only unknown but obviously destined to remain so.)

A 1970 issue of Adam included the complete text of a previously impublished Nativity play by Jean-Paul Sartre, called "Bariona or The Sun of Thonder." It was written as a prefa-tory note by Martin Essim explains, for presentation to Sartre's fellow-immates in a German war-prisoner camp at Christmas. 1940. It was Sartre's first play and he himself played the role of Balthazar, "the one among the three kings from the Orient...who makes Barions see the meaning of the birth of the Saviour." Esslin said, "There were a number of Catholic priests in the camp and Sartre wanted to foster the solidarity of all French prisoners of war at that moment in the history

A 1971 issue, most of which was devoted to the Proust centenary, contains three poems by Jorge Ians Borges and an English translation of a Borges story, "The Promise," previously unpublished, which must be one of the shortest short stories ever written—approximately 370 words:

It would be misleading to give the impression that all (or even most) of Adam's contributors are of Sartre's or Borges's stature. About half of the 16 contributors to that issue are people who may be quite distinguished in their fields but whose names are unknown to me. ("...For decades," Grindea said in the final Rochester issue, "our greatest and most nagging concern was how to cope honorably with the printers'

bills and how to reward the truly impecunious contributors with token fees. . . .") This, of course, puts the finger on one of the great services rendered by magazines like Adam and the best of its extinct predecessors: It gives the unknown artist

(writer, poet, playwright) a chance to break into print,
The 1971 issue mainly about Proust, contains texts in French as well as English, which is not unusual in Adam. A 1965 issue given over to Baudelaire and Berlioz contained, among other attractions, 51 letters by Berlioz some originals, some in English translation. Several of the French originals are reproduced in facsimile, with scribbled bits of musical scores.

As for the names of contributors that ring no bells, a 1969 issue incloded three that have rung plemy of bells, but not previously in lit. mag. circles: Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins. From the cover flustration, a sculpture by Henry Moore expressly for Adam, to the back tower, a rear view of the same sculpture, the entire issue was built around the moon theme, traced through the ages in proce and poetry. But to return to Our Hero, Miron Grindes, whom we left falling through space at the University of Rochester. The introduction to that last Rochester issue ended. This will of course not be the end of Adam . . . We hope to be able in our Inext! Issue to announce the prospects for yet another period of independent existence—as in the pasti"

A fairly diligent hunt through the Paris bookshops disclosed, however, no sign of a new Adam—though several places said the name sounded familiar. What had happened? A phone call to England elicited part of the answer.

Miron Grindes had landed on his feet, as usual, at 28 Emperor's Gate, his London flat, from which Adam is producted and on the phone has sounded electrical.

ed, and on the phone he sounded cheerful, even ebullient. But was the adjective in Cyril Connolly's tribute—"Miron Grindea's indestructible Adam"—still applicable? Would "the most lion-hearted of all the little magazines," in The Bookseller's phrase, be roaring again or would it not?,

(To be continued, perhaps.)

Today's Army Called '152,000% Better'

The United States Army, says Sammy Davis ir, has come a long way since he served as a GI back in World War II. In that, "it's just about 152,000 percent better now," said the entertainer, interviewed after performance for severage and said the said. ing for servicemen at an Army hase in South Victorian. Praising the effort they're making on black and white relationships."

Davis said: "They're bending some rules these days. They're regarding men as individuals. For example? Well, when I was in the Army I was on a post where a coloxed guy couldn't get his hair cut. Now you can. There are a thousand little things like that making things better now. Maybe they're little, but the total is big. The relationship between black and white is better."

Its records are hardly the top of the pop charts. The quality is tinny and distorted, and post oftechnicians frankly admit it's a "lousy service." Be that as it may, Disl-a-Disc. the British General Post Office's telephone pop-music service, was dialed 55 million times in 1971, bringing in a revenue of well over $200 mil-tion and absolutely actounding anyone with an ear for music. National figures, published yes-terday in a GPO builetin, had the "speaking-clock" service way out in front, as usual, with 300 million time calls. Dial-s-Disc, however, far outdistanced the third-place service—cricket-score calls which registered a puny 12 million calls. "We're really at a loss," said a GPO official interviewed by UPI on Dial-a-Disc. The average telephone works on a sound band within 3,000 hertz cycles. Record-players start higher than that and go up to 20,000. This makes Dial-a-Disc's sound quality worse than the tinniest record-player in the world." As for the selections offered the public, UPI records that yesterday's offering, at precisely 5:10 a.m., was "American Pie," sung to banjo accompaniment by Don MacLean. . .

... Clad in brown boots, brown pants with white polka-dots and a stylishly cut tan sports jacket, Lt. Col. Alfred M. Worden, Apollo-15 command-module pilot last summer, breezed into New York over the weekend to explain why he considers two April appearances on "Misterogers' Neighbor-hood," a children's TV program, important both to him and to the nation. I have been violently opposed to the National A nautics and Space Adminis tion's rule forbidding the P ence of anyone under 16 2 space launch," said Wor" "Kids aren't paying the si bill yet, but they're facchi by the space program and s frightened by it sometimes think on TV we can explain program to them." On one of programs, reports The New ? Times, Worden gives the chik a no-nonsense, first-hand scription of the back side of s moon: "It's lumpy like portal As for the visible side of a moon, 'It's smooth like cho.'s pudding."
